WASHINGTON as viewed by YOUR SENATOR

A. WILLIS ROBERTSON

Congress passed all ten of the major departmental appropriation bills for the 1955 fiscal year before that year began on July 1 and thus paved the way for an early adjournment.

Those interested in Federal economy can take comfort from the fact that the total amount of money appropriated in these bills was approximately five and a half billion dollars less than was appropriated in the same bills last year and approximately one and a half billion dollars less that the President's budget recommendations for the coming year.

Those more pessimistically inclined will point out, however, that whereas we ended the 1954 fiscal year last week with a deficit of around $3.3 billion, the Treasury is estimating that the deficit at the end of this year will be closer to four billion. This is because the reductions in spending authorizations have been more than matched by tax cuts that will reduce the Government's revenue collections.

Early this year I predicted, in one of these columns, that our ability to balance the Federal budget next year would depend largely on the international situation and that unless conditions improved quickly such a balance would be impossible. Such a large percentage of Federal spending in recent years has been for security purposes that it is difficult to make a real showing in budget cutting without reducing defense funds and that obviously cannot be done to any extent while we face the imminent threat of another world war.

The 1955 appropriation for the Department of Defense was $34.3 billion and we reduced that this year to $28.8 billion, which was around one billion less than the President had asked. That, I fe,t was as far as we could prudently go at this time and we all recognize that if conditions in Latin America, East Asia or in other areas where the Communists are formenting trouble, become more critical it will be necessary to make a supplemental appropriation before this fiscal year is over which will wipe out any intended savings on defense.

Congress has not yet acted on the Mutual Security appropriation, for which the President asked $3.5 billion as compared with $4.5 billion appropriated last year. Considering the large carry over I am inclined to think that we can make a substantial cut in the new budget. That would mean doing away with most economic aid, for which I believe the time has passed, and also feel that we should limit our military aid to those nations which clearly demonstrate their willingness to cooperate with us and with each other in holding the line against totalitarian aggression.

James Carson Appointed To Farm Comm.

James A. Carson, of R. F. D. 2, Appomattox, is the newly appointed member of the Appomattox County Farmers Home Administration committee, Wm. J. Leftwich, the agency's county supervisor announced this week. The appointment became effective July 1, 1954.

Mr. Carson operates a Grade "A" dairy farm in addition to his general farming operations. Mr. Carson and his father own and operate this farm together. Prior to his returning to the old home place he was employed in Lynchburg for a number of years.

The other two members of the three-member committee for Appomattox County are Elliott W. Marshall, of Spout Spring, and William E. Inge, of Appomattox. Mr. Marshall operates a general farm in the Spring Mill community and Mr. Inge runs a Grade "A" dairy near Appomattox.

Each member is named for a 3-year term, and one appointment expires each year. No member completing a 3-year term can succeed himself.

Every agricultural county in the United States has such a committee to help the Farmers Home Administration county supervisor adapt the agency's loan policies to local conditions including farm credit needs.

During the past year, the county committee for Appomattox County has approved 13 loans out of a total of 21 applications received, Mr. Leftwich reported. Three of these were Special Livestock Loans.

The Farmers Home Administration makes loans to family-type farm operators to buy, improve, or operate efficient farms, or for profitable operation. Special livestock loans are made where temporary credit is needed to enable the operator to remain in operation. The agency also makes emergency loans in counties or states that have been designated by the Secretary of Agriculture as areas where emergency credit is needed. However, the agency does not make loans of any type to any applicant whose needs can be handled by other credit sources.

Before any money can be borrowed through the agency, an applicant must have the approval of the county committee. In the case of a farm ownership loan, the farm to be purchased, enlarged, or improved, must also be approved by the committee, the county supervisor explained.

Some one raised the point the other day that perhaps Curtis Blackwell had done more "to" Appomattox than any other person here. He has had a hand in the building and rebuilding and remodeling of many of the town's principal buildings. We sugested to him that maybe he should put a zipper on Main St. to expedite his many remodeling jobs.

It is gratifying to note that the new sidewalks on Court Street are really being used. They were sorely needed, and this street now looks better—and is safer.

How true, for the large and capable staff is a boost to local business. We see the Troopers patronizing local restaurants and business places, and this payroll is a great asset to Appomattox. Add in the fact that it is most comforting to know that we have police protection and service so readily available. VA. RANKS 6th IN U. S. COAL OUTPUT

Virginia, the sixth ranking coal producing state in the nation, last year produced 18,762,503 tons of bituminous and semi-anthricite coal, according to the Old Dominion's Department of Labor and Industry.

Although noting that the amount of coal produced in 1953 fell short by two million tons from the record high of 1952, the report showed that Buchanan County, with an output of 5,754,172 tons, again led all coal-producing counties in the state. Wise County closely rivalled Buchanan, with 5,250,685 tons, followed by Dickenson with 4,331,395.

The report noted that the worth of machinery used in Virginia coal mining last year totalled more than 20 million, with land and buildings estimated at more than 16 million.

Continued mechanization in mining methods "are making definite inroads in the number of workers utilized in coal mining, the report said. The number of workers engaged in all phases of coal mining in 1953 was 13,779, representing a decline of 3,227 workers since 1952.

Tomato Tips

Thirty quarts per person—that's the tomato quota recommended by VPI nutritionists.

They say that amount will provide enough for serving at least four times a week after the fresh ones are gone. Tomatoes are an excellent source of vitamin C—and most people need more of it.

You should get 20 quarts from a bushel, depending, of course, on how good they are, how large and firm, and how many green spots must be cut out.

For home canning, the cold pack is best. The best flavor, color, and food value come from tomatoes packed cold in clean jars and processed in boiling water to cover. Process pints 25 minutes, quarts 35.

Peel red, ripe, firm tomatoes. Drop them directly into jars. Press them down so the jar is full of tomatoes and juice. Get out all the air. Add salt to season, seal according to directions for the top you are using, and process. Don't use the "open-kettle" method. It destroys too much vitamin C, and the tomatoes are more likely to spoil.

Tomato juice is good canned or frozen. Wash red, ripe, firm tomatoes; cu. up; mash a few to get some juice; and heat in a covered pan just long enough to get them soft and drive out the air. Strain through sieve or food mill, season with salt, reheat just to the boiling point, pour into clear hot jars, and process 5 minutes.

To freeze juice, heat tomatoes in a covered pan just long enough to get them soft and drive out the air. Strain the juice, chill it, and pour at once into moisture — and air-proof containers. Seal and freeze immediately.

NEW SEASON OF THE COMMON GLORY OFFERS CHANGES

By Robert A. Wilson

Perhaps one of the more important reasons why Virginia's great outdoor drama of the American Revolution, "The Common Glory," continues to be a successful attraction year after year is the ability of its producers to make it fresh and different each season. With the opening of its eighth summer presentation in Williamsburg, the play sets a new high in this respect.

The first night audicance of some 1,200 persons came to the beautiful waterfront Matoaka amphitheatre to witness Paul Green's version of Thomas Jeffersons' and other Virginia patriots' roles in the fight for American independence. They saw that story powerfully told, and got along with it, highly polished performances by a new "little symphony" orchestra, the now nationally known a capella choir and a spirited and talented company of dancers.

The eighth season's presentation is more radically different than ever before because of the new orchestra, musical score, a re-written second act, new staging and new costumes. The "little symphony" lived up to its pre-season descriptions of possessing some of the finest student musicians in the east. The use of the orchestra, instead of an organ, is particularly effective because the group is actually a part of many scenes. The orchestra wears costumes of the period and uses only those instruments that would have been found in a similar group playing in the 18th century.

There will be a difference of opinion about the new second act. Critics already have hailed it, however, as "vastly improved" and "powerful and with enormous significance." The famous Jamestown scene has been completely revised.

There is much new staging. One scene which has been considerably improved from this standpoint is the dramatic Yorktown battle where the Continentals storm the British positions while a ship of the French fleet sails across the lake's waters in the background.

Costumes seem to be more brilliant than ever as the entire company, larger than ever before, fills the gigantic stage in several scenes.

This season which runs from June 30 through September 5 promises greatness in the best tradition of "The Glory."

MAKE COURTESY YOUR CODE WHEN DRIVING

For centuries "Courtesy" has been the key that unlocked many doors. Sir Walter Raleigh is more often remembered for his acts of courtesy than his deeds of valor.

Unfortunately, in the hectic rush of modern day living—acts of courtesy are more and more confined to the home—to social gatherings—in places where the individual is known and easily recognized. However, courteous acts are frequently overlooked when the same individual is behind-the-wheel.

No one likes to be told he is impolite. It therefore becomes necessary for everyone to adopt courtesy as his own Code of the Road and live up to it! Courtesy extended by one driver to another can spread—it can become an epidemic—for courtesy is contagious!

During 1952 driver violations accounted for 80% of all fatal accidents. More than half of the pedestrians killed in motor vehicle accidents during 1952 were either violating a traffic law or engaging in some unsafe action. Traffic laws have been made to protect you—to guide you in making driving decisions. Disregard of these laws is a dangerous and dangerous practice. Discourtesy on the highway can kill . . . can injure . . can cost you time and money —The Vepovian.

Increased Use of Milking Machines

What would you say is the most important change of the past thirty years in handling milk on farms?

A study following a survey shows that the increase in the use of milking machines is probably the answer. Back in 1920, farmers in this country had only 55,000 milkers. Today the number is nearing a million. However, since there are about two and one-half million farms producing milk for sale, there is room for more. Mechanical milk coolers are another big change. In 1920 few farms had such equipment.

Dairying is another of the fields in which modern times have brought vast changes.
